

Contents

Preface	v
Acknowledgments	ix
PART I SOCIAL COORDINATION, THE ECONOMY AND THE ENVIRONMENT	1
1 Introduction	3
2 Scarcity and systems of social coordination	18
3 Social coordination in market and planned economies	32
4 The economy and the environment	50
PART II LIMITATIONS OF MARKET SIGNALLING AND INCENTIVES	67
5 High costs of markets	69
6 Non-excludable goods	87
7 Common pool resources	100
8 Limitations of government signalling and incentives	112
PART III DECISION-MAKING TOOLS	133
9 Decision making over time	135
10 Cost–benefit analysis of environmental changes	145
11 Valuing the environment	158

12	Stated preference valuation techniques	176
13	Monitoring changes in economic–environmental systems	*
PART IV LOCALISED ENVIRONMENTAL PROBLEMS		195
14	The economics of pollution control: two parties	197
15	The economics of pollution control: many parties	207
16	Social coordination in waste disposal and recycling	*
PART V GLOBAL ENVIRONMENTAL PROBLEMS		233
17	The economics of global pollution: ozone depletion and climate change	235
18	Management of common pool resources	260
19	The economic significance of biodiversity	279
20	The economics of biodiversity loss	289
21	Measures to preserve biodiversity	304
PART VI DEALING WITH UNCERTAINTY		327
22	Social coordination under uncertainty	329
23	Uncertainty involving ignorance and irreversibility	345
24	Economics and environmental problems: important lessons	359
Notes		365
Index		383

* Chapters 13 and 16 can be found online at: www.routledge.com/9781741145762.